

accident,
he was
olin, for
ngland,
finally
ad went obtaining n, and 9 Nov.
from a
Colonel
bravest
months,
of the manner
is work
7, Nell,
Dublin.
ed with

served

ed with

Regt.;
t. 1914.

Regt.;
t. 1914.

served

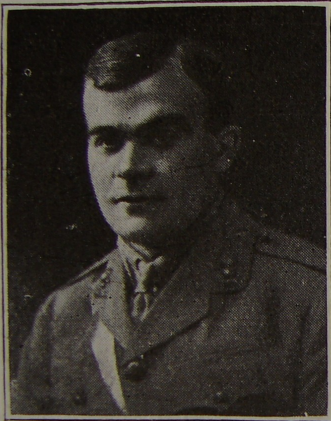

tn. The
s Smith
rthcawl,
ry, dau.
tudland,
rgan, 15
ege, co.
abridge;
re Regt.

Cardiff School of Commerce; was employed as a Clerk at the Cardiff Railway Offices; enlisted in Aug. 1914, after the outbreak of war; served with the Salonika Army from Nov. 1915, and was killed in action near Lake Doiran 14 Sept. 1916. Buried by the small church there; unm.

MORRISH, H., Able Seaman; lost on H.M.S. Bulwark 26 Nov. 1914.

MORRISON, A., Corpl.; lost on H.M.S. Bulwark 26 Nov. 1914.

MORRISON, DOUGLAS ST. GEORGE, Lieut., 130th Battery, R.F.A., only s. of Robert Douglas Morrison, County Inspector of Royal Irish Constabulary, of Lisburn, co. Antrim, by his wife, Henrietta Maria Langrishe, dau. of the late Rev. William St. George, Bryansford, co. Down; b. Belmont, Boyle, co. Roscommon; educ. Royal School, Armagh, and Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated in 1914; took a high place on entering the Army from the Army School of the University; obtained a commission in the R.F.A. 19 July, 1912; served with the Expeditionary Force in France and Flanders from 24 Aug. 1914; took part in all the important engagements, and was afterwards attached to an anti-aircraft battery, and was accidentally killed 3 Sept. 1917, near Bapaume. Buried at Achiet-le-Grand. A brother officer wrote: "To have left a memory so fragrant, so full of manly kindness, frank, generous, beautiful, so simple yet so wise, so tender, considerate, thoughtful—that is a thing not given to most people to do. The world had not yet laid its cold hand on him; he had not yet known how hard and unfeeling and cruel it could be. I think somehow he has won the Crown without carrying the Cross for long, and he has given his young life that the world may be the better for it." Unm.

Douglas St. G. Morrison.

MORRISON, HERBERT, Private, No. 23264, 2nd Battn. (25th Foot) The King's Own Scottish Borderers, s. of the late Thomas Morrison, by his wife, Allison (16, Jedburgh Avenue, Rutherglen), dau. of Capt. Thomas Smith, of Kingholm Quay, Dumfries; b. Dumfries, 27 March, 1889; educ. St. Michael's Street School there; Stonelaw

